Any changes in OCI procedures or policies that will be in effect for the first time during Fall 2015:

The University of St. Thomas School of Law provides this information regarding its OCI policies. The University of St. Thomas School of Law encourages employers to participate in our On-Campus Interviewing Program (OCI), which the timing of which may vary per year and will be adjusted as needed for public health or other purposes, or as scheduled outside of that timeframe with the Career and Professional Development Office. (OCI details available online at <https://www.stthomas.edu/law/careercenter/informationforemployers/>.) To ensure a fair and efficient recruitment and hiring process for all students and employers participating in OCI, employers shall not conduct initial or callback interviews of rising second-year students prior to the employer's OCI interview dates.

Employers may, however, interview rising second-year students prior to OCI as part of an organized job fair. The University of St. Thomas School of Law recognizes the need to balance the business needs of employers with the educational and professional development needs of our students. Employers should refrain from any activity that may adversely affect the ability of students to make an independent and thoughtful decision. Employers should not offer special inducements to persuade students to accept offers of employment earlier than is prescribed. Offers should be made in writing with all material terms and conditions of employment clearly expressed. Students should immediately withdraw their application from consideration and/or decline any offers if they have no expectation or intention of accepting an offer of employment. Once students accept an offer of employment, they must withdraw from consideration from any other employer. The University of St. Thomas School of Law also wants to ensure that the employment relationships that develop from our programs and services result in productive professional relationships. Affording students a reasonable period of time for reviewing, considering, and responding to offers is an important part of promoting successful recruiting. The University of St. Thomas School of Law expects employers to afford students at least 14 days to consider and respond to an offer of employment that results from an interview that took place as a part of OCI. This timeline applies regardless of whether the students has been previously employed by the employer.

OCI Date Assignment Procedure: First come first served
