Diversity

We list both private and public sector diversity scholarships and fellowships on our website that offer a clerkship/internship component as well as forward these opportunities to our Texas Law Diversity Listserv.

Pro Bono

The Richard and Ginni Mithoff Pro Bono Program offers pro bono opportunities to all students at Texas Law and promotes an ethic of service throughout the law school. The Mithoff Program empowers students to use their developing legal knowledge and skills to address unmet legal needs in the community starting as early as their first semester at Texas Law. Students often get as much back from these projects as they give, through opportunities to explore diverse areas of substantive law and develop practical lawyering skills. The Mithoff Program also introduces students to the legal profession's tradition and ethical obligation of pro bono service, and helps students incorporate a commitment to service into their professional identities. The Mithoff Program is part of the William Wayne Justice Center for Public Interest Law and plays a central role in fulfilling the Justice Center's mission to promote equal justice for all and to support public service in the legal profession.

Student Organizations

Narrative

Long recognized as a leading law school, Texas Law today continues a rich tradition of excellence in legal education. Texas Law offers 24 clinics and internship programs led by award-winning faculty and practicing attorneys; has won more than a dozen national moot court and mock trial championships in the past several years; and is one of the top law schools to place clerks on the U.S. Supreme Court. The training received and the courses offered at Texas Law provide our students the legal education necessary for practicing in any part of the United States or the world. As a result, the top firms in Texas and across the country count Texas Law alumni among their associates and partners. Our alumni have distinguished careers in private practice, government agencies, public interest organizations, corporations, and non-traditional career fields.
